Beauchamp Tower

The History of the Tower of London is great, bloody and cruel and the Beauchamp Tower has its part to play in its story. Beauchamp Tower is just one of the 21 towers which, together, form the Tower of London castle complex. The Tower of London covers an area of 18 acres and its magnificent architecture covers almost all the styles which have flourished in England. Although the Tower is no longer a place of great military strength it has in time past been a fortress, a palace, and a prison. This section provides key facts and information about the Beauchamp Tower.

The Beauchamp Tower is one of twenty one towers which, together, form the Tower of London Castle complex. Built by King Edward I between 1275 and 1281 in the Edwardian / Gothic style the tower was built for accommodation, including prisons, and as gateways protecting the Tower of London's concentric castle design.

PAYE were appointed as main contractor to provide a specialist access scaffolding incorporating a unique advertising banner and then clean and conserve the stonework and replace the lead roofs using Code 8 lead.
